

GET LEARNING

30 MINUTES

READY TO GO

POWER OF PERSUASION

➤ GETTING INTO THE ACTIVITY

McDonalds is better than KFC, right? No? Put your persuasion skills to the test as you explore a range of different questions. Can you persuade someone else that your argument is stronger than theirs?

This activity is all about picking sides and then trying to persuade others that they should change their mind and join your side of the argument. For each round read one of the questions out below and ask those taking part to signal if they agree (thumbs up) or disagree (thumbs down). Then for each round nominate one person from each side of the argument to explain why they are right and why people should change their mind. Debate should be light and fun, rather than too heavy or fierce. After both people have made their argument allow the rest of the group to change their mind if they wish to. The person who makes the greatest number of people change their minds wins. Who has what it takes to be the best persuader in the group?

McDonalds is better than KFC	Game of Thrones is overrated
Minecraft is better than FIFA	Chess is a sport
Rugby is better than Football	iPhones are rubbish
Films are better than watching TV	Liverpool will win the league

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

- No Equipment

KEEPING EVERYONE SAFE

When having debates and discussions make sure everyone understands that everyone's opinions are to be respected and listed to.